

Process Book for Bootstrap

Purpose:

My Bootstrap website will be an informational site that shows the steps to take when researching the deed of a home in Fairfax County.

Audience:

My audience will be the Fall 2020 HIS 180 Historical Archaeology class. Two PhD professors and 15 students will be viewing the site. The age group of the class is split down the middle between beginning history students and seasoned professionals some aged beyond 60 years of age. The class is a prerequisite to the Public History Certificate program which many students in the class are looking to earn. Because archaeologists tend to be observers, the website must be visually appealing and historically exact. Correct terms learned in the class must be used, and the terminology will not be well-known by the public.

HISTORIC LANDS

America's story begins outdoors. Our lands and waters are the backdrop for our most poignant national memories: homesteads, explorations, war, escape, adventure and more. From day one at The Conservation Fund, we've worked to protect the places where history was made.

I like the natural feel of this page. The site will be about searching historical deeds, so I want to make the homepage have a less urban and a more rural feel. Since my search will date back to at least the time of George Washington, I want to show this by bringing in nature.

How to Research the History of Your House

Every old house has a story to tell. Find out when your home was built, who lived there, and how they changed it.

How Do You Find Out the History of an Old House?

Tracing the history of an old house is like making your way through an overgrown garden maze. In most cases, unless you are a descendant of the original owners and have an attic full of

This website caught my eye because it deals with the same topic of my website. The depth of field in the photograph is effective.

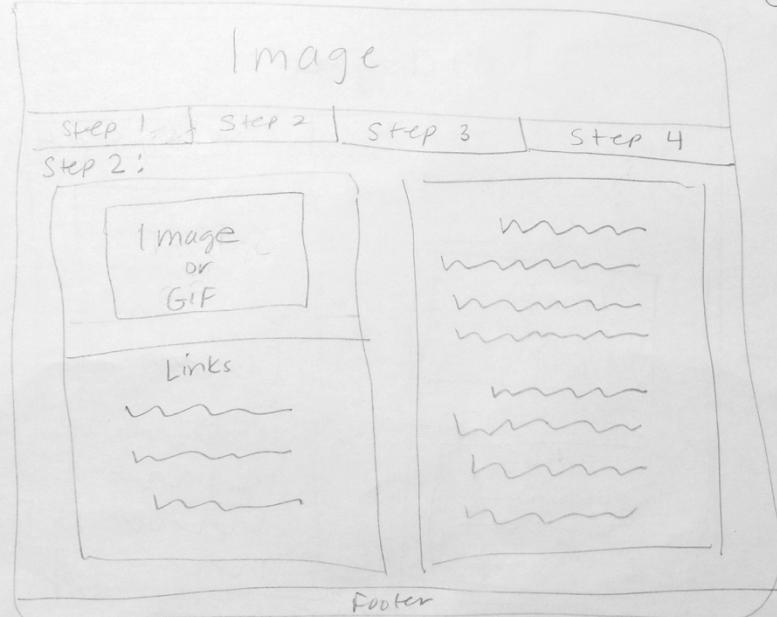

A screenshot of the The Army Historical Foundation website. The header features the foundation's logo and navigation links for "ABOUT US", "SHOW YOUR SUPPORT", "HOST YOUR EVENT", "HISTORY CENTER", "REGISTRIES", "SHOP", and "DONATE". Below the header is a large banner image of a building at night, with the text "Museum Update" overlaid. The main content area includes a section titled "Preserve the heritage, educate the future." with a subtext about the mission of the foundation. It also features sections for "How you can help" (with a "MAKE A DONATION" button) and "Who we are" (with a "MORE ABOUT US" button). There are also images of people shaking hands and a woman working on a historical artifact.

The header and navigation are what I may consider. Also, the images that run down the left of the page are attractive.
